Poetry by Kevin King Hope

Desiderium

If you would allow me a moment of honesty

Take me away from this place

From caves, to open shorelines

Not because I fear the darkness, but because I want to unfurl

Not because I fear the damp, but because I want to be engulfed

Cloak my skin in preternatural waves

Brace my lungs with rocking rhythm

This is an ode to the sublime depths

O, take me away from this place

Mindless sonder, with each cloud, all day long

Ebullient

Multitude

Contained dance

Brimming

Scintillation

Empty

Singularity

Shimmering

There
